1. A new floating pumping station for oil and gasoline has been built on the left bank of the Little Danube River in Bratislava. This station consists of four pumps and several storage tanks for oil and gasoline. An underground double pipe line connects the station with the Slovnaft refinery. One of these lines serves to draw oil from the station to the refinery, and the other carries gasoline from the refinery to the station. The new pumping stations can simultaneously pump oil from two tankers to the refinery. The old station, which is equipped with three pumps, draws oil into the storage tanks. This oil is later transported by tank car to other Czechoslovak refineries for processing. About 12 to 14 hours are required to empty one tanker. An additional two hours are required to clean the tanker. The normal working complement for one shift is 220 men. However, because of the shortage of regular workers, voluntary brigades of Czechoslovak Youth Union members have been formed to help with the work.
2. Employees of the River Navigation Company (PPU) are responsible for the land transportation, storing and/or reloading of all goods which have been unloaded from ships in the Bratislava Harbor. Goods which are to be transhipped by river from Bratislava are handled by employees of the Czechoslovak Danube Navigation Company (CSDP). A commercial commission consisting of Czechoslovak, Soviet, Satellite and Austrian representatives is located at the port. The Soviets have six representatives on the commission, while Poland has three, Hungary, Rumania, China, Albania and Austria have two and Bulgaria has one.
3. Military craft on the Danube are controlled by a Czech-Soviet military staff consisting of about 15 members. About 60 SNB members together with a very strong militia guard the port. Members of the STB are in all the port offices.
4. A total of about 3,000 workmen are employed at the port in Bratislava. This number includes the PPU and the CSDP workers, about 600 clerks, 400 workers manning the pumping stations, 600 men engaged in reloading goods, 150 brigade workers, 40 railroad employees and about 200 prisoners from the Bratislava jail. A partial list of leading personnel is as follows:
